New Hardness For Steel Seen

PITTSBURGH (U.P.)—A new electric heat treating furnace which will be used to study combinations of radio-active elements and steel has been developed by engineers of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co.

Intending first to make the elements "radio-active" by subjecting them to treatment in the 65-foot "atom smashing" machine developed by the company, engineers say that new hardnesses of steel may be found with the "radio-active" treatment.

Discarding the accepted theory that elements are constant substances, Dr. A. A. Bates, manager of the chemical and metallurgical division of the Westinghouse Research laboratories, said the "atom-smasher" will change one element into another. The smasher can energize one element into intense radio-activity rivaling that of radium itself.

The new furnace, Dr. Bates said, will facilitate an investigation of crystallographic transformations in steel.

A friend of ours, salesman for a large oil company in Long Beach, tells of the following Green. To do so is to do so in his firm. It was occasioned by a letter written to the head office in San Francisco by an inmate car that at the last hour of the Pasadena this Complainer had dire need to use a service station rest room on Colorado Ave., for which he needed a five cent piece. Plenty mad, The Complainer sat down, dashed off a scorch to San Francisco. Typical of a huge corporation, wheels began to grind slowly, gained momentum, finally reached a screaming crescendo with The Complainer's letter going from protest to second vice-president, to Los Angeles manager, to Long Beach manager, to our salesman friend who climbed in his car, drove out to personally placate The Complainer. Rather embarrassed as well as flattered, The Complainer refused his nickel back, insisted that the rest room was a company operated one, in contradiction to the company's findings that had warranted him a privately owned garage next door, thought all the time he was a guest of The Corporation.

First meeting of the class was held March 27, 7 p. m., evening high school. Like gatherings will be held every Monday hereafter. B. E. Reeder, secretary of the high school asked Shop Talk to herein mention these classes in the hopes that interested singers (good & bad) will take up the class, attend with their. 26 Men Seized in Gambling Raids Pay $340 in Fines

Chris S. Adzovich, 27, who gave his occupation as a truck driver and said he lived at 2122 Torrance boulevard, pleaded guilty to operating a percentage game as did Benny Gortzman, 26, who said he was a former steelworker and lived at the Roi Tan hotel. Both were fined $200 or 100 days in jail of which $150 was suspended. If re-arrested in two years they will be automatically sentenced to 75 days in jail. Judge Leasing pointed out. Both paid $50 fines.

Warned About Abatement
Deputy Sheriff J. E. King, who was a member of the raiding party, warned Torrance, Crawford and Reece that if gambling is resumed in their poolhalls "we will go to the Attorney-General and start abatement proceedings to close your places permanently."

Police Chief John Stroh also insisted that the operators remove their "bookies" and other equipment that has been used in the gambling operations. This the proprietors of the places promised to do at once.

The authorities originally charged Adzovich and Gortzman with bookmaking on horse races, not only on California tracks but elsewhere in the U. S. They were charged with "bookies" and Sheriff King concerning their connections with "higher ups" but both refused the information desired. They maintained, even tho' the authorities confronted them with the actual book records that showed considerable money transactions in "bookie" style that they were working independently.

Judge's Statement
Police discounted their statements, pointing out that the pair

Eshelman Area Tops Oil Activity

(Continued from Page 1-A) tent from 5,160 feet at 238th and Walnut is holding up well, it was reported. Hydrocarbon Products Inc. has finished Torrance No. 1 nucleus of 237th and Eshelman, flowing and swabbing some 200 barrels.

Criton-Covin Oil has completed No. 1, flowing 190 barrels of 26.2 gravity, cutting 2.6 percent. Near 237th and Eshelman, Lion Star Drilling added Pester No. 1, flowing 190 barrels of 27.0 gravity, cutting 1.0 percent from 5,170 feet this week.

At the southeast corner of 237th and Eshelman, A. B. C. Oil finished its Angelch No. 1, flowing 200 barrels by heads cutting 2.5 percent. Farther south, at 242nd and Eshelman, Deep Hole Drilling's No. 2 failed to flow on a test of the upper zone.

Attempting Revival
At the most solitary venture to date, King Petroleum is reporting corings taken from 4,800 feet show the top of the oil structure has been reached. This well is on 247th, east of Walnut Golden Bear and Bass and Goodnight have outpost wells drilling in this vicinity.

West Petroleum company is going ahead with its attempt at reviving the old South Torrance field near Sepulveda and Hawthorne boulevards on the west side. The location is along the edge of proved territory for the 10-year-old shallow field and the new venture will plumb lower stratas.

had telephones in the poolhall and used them to call outside numbers in placing wagers.

Before passing sentence on the "small fry" of card players that appeared before him yesterday morning, Judge Leasing declared: "I know it is impossible to stop gambling. There is little or nothing we can do to eliminate it from our community. But it is necessary to make arrests of this kind from time to time to show that the police mean business when they try to keep our city clean."

"I think if a man can afford it, gambling is alright at times. We all do it and it's human nature to gamble. But it has a bad effect on our young people here to see you men frequenting gambling places openly and persistently. I order each of you to pay a fine of $25 of which $20 will be suspended on condition you are not re-arrested for this offense within two years," Judge Leasing concluded.
